“The Labor Department reported today that the economy created 114,000 jobs in September while the unemployment rate fell to 7.8 percent, the lowest level in 45 months.

Today’s report contained both good and bad news.

While the good news is that the economy added jobs for a twenty-fourth consecutive month in September, the fact that the September employment rise was slower than the prior two months and just over half the jobs created last September it provides little evidence that the economy is rebounding from the slow growth that took place during the first half of this year.
